Week 31: Crataegus azarolus. (Rosaceae family), commonly known as the Mediterranean hawthorn, is a species of small deciduous trees native to the Mediterranean region, which includes parts of Southern Europe, North Africa, and Western Asia. In Arabic, it is known as the Zaarour tree (شجرة الزعرور). Fruits that mature at the end of the summer season resemble miniature apples and belong to the same plant family. A beautiful specimen tree grows facing the cafeteria's kitchen- j... See more

Did you know that the famous bronze bust of Theophilus Waldmeier that resides on the school's main campus was unveiled at the school on March 27, 1986?

Before that date, the bust had been a fixture at the Hospital for Mental and Nervous Disorders in Asfuriyeh, which Waldmeier had founded.

Once the hospital shut down due to the war in Lebanon, it was decided that BHS would be the best home for the bust ... See more
